Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .In 1914-15 the subject of the seminary is slavery and the negro problem. After a preliminary survey of the history of slavery in the colonial period such topics as the slavery compromises of the constitution, the growth of slavery in the South, the abolition of the slave trade, the Missouri Compromise, the anti-Slavery movement, nullification, the Mexican War, the Wilmot Proviso, the compromise measures of 1850, the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the Dred Scott decision, the abolition of slavery, and the adoption of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments are discussed. Special attention is paid to the conflict between sectionalism and nationalism and the connection between slavery, territorial expansion, and the development of constitutional theories. In 1915-16 the American colonies in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries will be the subjects of the seminary. The political constitutional, and social problems of the colonies in the seventeenth century will be studied in the first semester. In the second semester special stress will be laid upon the development in the eighteenth century of the imperial administrative machinery and upon the ethnical distribution of population in the colonies. In 1916-17 the Revolution, the Confederation and the Constitution will be the subjects of study. American history from 1776 to 1789 is discussed primarily from the local point of view as a step in the conflict between the seaboard aristocracy and the democracy of the frontier. The social and economic forces which led to the adoption of the Federal Constitution and the subsequent formation...
