Excerpt: . . . 11 Conclusion We have successfully prevented the emergence of full-fledged failed states in our region so far, but we are ever alert to the warning signs. In this regard, we view our assistance programs as a form of preventive medicine. We are making invest-ments today aimed at preventing the future growth of extremist and anti-American ideologies, of organized crime and infectious disease, and other forces that could ul-timately touch our shores. As I stated at the beginning of my remarks, we also view our assistance programs as an indispensable tool of our diplomacy that helps us garner support for imme-diate, as well as longer-term foreign policy objectives. And in that context, it is worth emphasizing that the overwhelming support we have received from the recipi-ents of SEED and FSA assistance in the global war on terrorism is not just based on the policies of governments currently in power. I truly believe that in most cases it is based on shared values that go deeper into these societies. These shared values have been promoted by our foreign assistance - including, very importantly, our pub-lic diplomacy and exchange programs - for the past 15 years since the fall of the Berlin Wall. Through our aid programs, Americans are engaging with non-govern-mental organizations, educational institutions, private companies, students, sci-entists, and many, many others. And this engagement is helping to form a network of linkages between our society and their societies, a web of linkages...
