Penguin, New Delhi, India, 2005. Paperback. Book Condition: New. First Edition. Set in France in the second half of the nineteenth century, The Diary of Mademoiselle DArvers, or Le Journal de Mademoiselle DArvers, is a novel of possibilities and limitations; of love, marriage and domesticity, and the heartaches and joys of growing up. Fifteen-year-old Marguerite, fresh from her convent education and extremely religious, returns to her family and experiences the first stirrings of love, only to find herself entangled in a complicated net of relationships. The story traces Marguerites growth through adolescence to maturity and marital happiness. Written in secret and discovered by the authors father after her death, this poignant novel is a unique and unexpected outcome of the intellectual, linguistic and cultural ferment of nineteenth-century colonial Bengal. Printed Pages: 168. Size: 13 Cms x 20 Cms.
