FROM THE END OF GENOA AS A SEPARATE STATE TO THE UNIFICATION OF ITALY In 1861. The Genoese when they adopted the French form of Republic in 1797, although preserving a nominal independence, in reality by that act extinguished their political existence, and they experienced a bitter proof of their true position only two years afterwards when Massena made use of the town as a resisting point against the Austrians. When Napoleon, on his return from Egypt, had by his coup d etat of the 18th Brumaire obtained, as first Consul, virtually supreme power in France, his first thought was to regain Italy from the allied forces, and Massena was ordered to divert the attention of the Austrians on Genoa, while he - the Consul - threw an army across the Alps in order to attack the enemy on the flank....
